Dear Friends and Fellow Republicans

CNN Declares Biden In Deep Trouble

It's bad when Joe Biden is losing CNN. According to CNN tracking, if the election were today, Donald Trump would win the electoral college with 272 votes, and Biden having closer to 225. This includes 11 states which are too close to call having an additional 40+ electoral college votes. To be President, the winner will need 270 electoral votes, and if CNN is to be believed here, Trump is already over the top. Now I have some serious questions about how CNN is doing their calculating. But the fact is that even CNN now admits that Biden is an albatross around the neck of the Democrat party, and if they're not careful, the GOP nominee will be the 46th President.

One Week to the Iowa Caucus

On January 15, thousands of fed up voters from the Great State of Iowa will gather in meeting halls, friend's houses, churches, and begin the process of sending Joe Biden to the dung heap of history where he belongs.

The race then goes to New Hampshire, then to Nevada, onto South Carolina, and after a few other states, will come to Virginia on March 5. Campaigns are very difficult things, and can be stressful to all involved. Many of us are supporting different candidates. Many of us are supporting Trump, some are supporting DeSantis, others Nikki Haley. Still others are supporting another candidate. It is my hope that during the nomination process, we can refrain from going after each other. Like this or not, we need each other at the end of the day, as one of the GOP field will be up against Joe Biden, the corporate media, the DEI Industrial Complex, and a whole host of counter culture radical leftists. We may disagree on some points. Disagreement is a great thing, so is passion. Hate speech against each other is not helpful.

Your friend and mine, Ros Poplar of Shenandoah County, has posted another fascinating article about how the cancel culture is killing America and American values. Ros talks this time about how the do gooder radicals inside the Biden regime want to remove a statue of William Penn from a park in Philadelphia Pa. Maybe Penn, who was a Quaker, wasn't enough of a supporter of the military industrial complex for the Biden cronies?
